It is doubtful if any other individual in the world has had as varied a career as Will Rogers, who comes to Terre Haute Saturday night, April 7th, to present one of his inimitable programs at the Indiana State Normal school gymnasium auditorium under the auspices of Normal School activities.

Rogers began life on a ranch in Oklahoma. During the years of his early manhood he was a cowboy, and it was as a rider and roper in a rodeo show that he made his debut in the show business. He entered vaudeville doing a rope throwing act, became a monologist, and was later starred in Ziegfeld's Follies.

Charles L. Wagner, noted New York impresario, recognizing Rogers' extraordinary talents as a comedian, induced him to desert the Follies and strike out as an individual attraction—a field in which he has attained the enviable distinction of being the greatest drawing card in America, and in which he unquestionably ranks at the world's greatest entertainer.

Mayor of Beverly Hills, California, movie star, author of syndicate newspaper features, writer for the Saturday evening Post, an unofficial ambassador to the world-at-large from the United States, Rogers is constantly viewing life from all angles, and always manages with uncanny ability, to see the funny side of things.
